Quick synopsis

Due to The 4AM Live Frat House, A Morning Job Was Tough to Hold Down.
Plus I was not good at the fundamentals of pool maintenance. This was a combination of

No prior experience in the field
Consistent Hangovers At Orientation
Lack of Hands on Skills in general

Lack of Understanding Of Pool

Cleaning Procedures

Nowhere else was this more evident than

The One Where

—the Boss and I started a pool cleaning session together. He Gave Me His 1s Pop Quiz

After about a week and a half of Training with one of his main dudes...

My 1st Move Was A Bad Start

Luckily I didn't do what I said My 1st Move was going to be

After my Initial Answer

To His In The Pool Pump Room Question

Of what's my first step?

If I want to start to clean this pool.

I forgot exactly what I said but I sure remember his answer=

If You Would've Done That You Would've blown up the Pump

1st Thing You Do Is You Turn Off The Pump.

That would be the last day I saw the pool cleaning Company boss

And a few days max before the exit ticket gravity bong hit.

It wasn't until at least another solid week until they dispossessed the Bike With Basket in the Front of It

Which I was given for the line of my short-lived duties as a Pool Cleaner Supervisor.

My next job was the one first chronicled in "Up All Night"
